

ASIAN GANG VIOLENCE

Asian race violence is on the increase in the most blatant manner in London's East End. Lone Whites have been savagely attacked by gangs of up to 30 Asians and there has been at least two deaths — both of Blacks at the hands of Asian gangs. No arrests have been made by police and local people live in fear of the gangs who can kill and maim without fear of punishment.

Asian gangs, typically 20 or 30 strong, have been responsible for attacks on lone individuals — black and white — in what many see as an attempt to impose a physical domination over areas where they live. Muggings of elderly women by gangs of six or seven are common.

The latest, most high profile attacks caused the East London Advertiser to carry the headline 'Race gang in bus ambush' at the end of October in a terrifying incident which could have happened to anyone. As the 309 bus stopped in heavy traffic in Ben Jonson Road, Stepney, swarms of Asian youths came out of alleys to attack the bus with bottles, bricks and stones. Terrified school children and pensioners cowered to avoid breaking glass, and the Asians forced their way onto the bus punching and kicking everyone indiscriminately. Children as young as thirteen had their heads stamped on and one youngster was hauled off the bus and thrown through a shop window. He was later taken to hospital for cuts to his neck. Brothers Billy and John, 11 and 16 escaped from the emergency exit after seeing an Asian lash out with a screwdriver on the bus at another youth.

After the attack, the Asians aged 16-20 made their getaway in nearby cars. The police have made no arrests and have been met by a wall of silence from the Asian community. One Asian too frightened to be named said: "These people don't believe in fighting one-to-one. I've been around here for fifteen years and it's just getting worse."

In the same edition of the East London Advertiser, it was revealed that the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) had dropped the case of a vicious race hate attack by a gang of 30 Asians on a white father of two. The man had gone into a park to recover a football taken by Asians who had also punched and kicked his son. The Asians set upon him with iron bars and sticks screaming anti-white racial abuse and left him with very serious head injuries (see July BN). The CPS claim that there is not enough evidence to proceed.

Local people have been let down by the system and abandoned by their elected representatives. Councillors and MPs alike have stayed silent in the face of the race gang violence.

Tower Hamlets BNP report that the local black community has shown increased acceptance of the party in the area and party workers believe that the murder of a black teenager on the Isle of Dogs by up to thirty Asians and increased racial attacks by Asians is part of the reason.

BNP RESPONSE

Immediately after the attack on the bus, the BNP was approached by local people to help. National Organiser, Richard Edmonds initiated a leaflet campaign under the cover name East London Campaign for Law & Order. Outlining the press reports in the ELA, the leaflet asked: What are the authorities doing to stop these attacks?; What are the police doing to arrest and successfully prosecute these criminals? And what are local MPs and councillors doing to promote safety on our streets? The answer of course is: not much, not enough and absolutely nothing.

Local people, who spotted that it was the BNP behind the campaign, cheered when they saw the BNP leaflet teams out and about following the racial attack by Asians. Numerous thumbs-up and "Well done lads" made the leafletting exercise a very rewarding one. Councillors have done nothing in response to the attack (many of whom are, in any case, Asian) and local people, know who their real friends are.

Unbelievably, just two weeks later there was a second identical attack on the 309 bus at exactly the same spot. This time, twenty Asians launched the attack, storming the single decker, lashing out with fists and boots. This time pensioners and children screamed at the driver to keep going and no-one was injured as the Asians chased the bus down the road throwing stones.

The attacks show the growing arrogance and intolerance of sections of the Asian community in a parallel with communal violence on the Indian subcontinent. This is the nightmare that the liberal fools talk about when they twitter on about multi-racialism. It won't work — it never has done and it never will. In the meantime, people are suffering and even dying on the blood-soaked altar of multi-racialism.

Race gang in bus ambush

BY LINSAY

ELDERLY East Enders were shoved to the ground and schoolchildren left shocked when a gang carried out a savage racial attack on a crowded bus.

But a wall of silence surrounds the brutal assault on the 309 bus because many terrified witnesses are afraid to speak out in case of reprisals.

The single-decker bus was ambushed as it pulled up in Ben Jonson Road, Stepney, on Thursday afternoon by 20 Asian youths who emerged from alleyways.

Elderly passengers were pushed aside as the thugs stormed onto the crowded bus before laying into school children — white and black and aged as young as 11 — with fists and belt buckles.

One youngster was hit on the head with a brick which smashed through a side window.

SEX PERVERTS AND CRIMINALITY

What is it about so many homosexuals that turns sexual deviancy into criminality? Thomas Hamilton the Dunblane murderer had an unhealthy interest in young boys. Local parents ensured that he couldn't prey on their children by way of Hamilton's running young people's clubs. He took his revenge out on society and the parents locally by killing sixteen little children. Daniel Handley's killers were homosexual perverts Morss and Tyler. A far higher percentage of paedophilia against minors is committed by homosexuals than is warranted by their percentage in the population. The 'gay' community is noticeably silent on this issue.

Recently, Peter Moore, a sadistic homosexual was convicted at Mold Crown Court for the stabbing to death of four men. He picked up all his victims from well-known homosexual haunts and he had a keen interest in the Nazis. The latter fact is, incidentally, symptomatic of society's popular perception of Nazism as evil incarnate with no redeeming features—and an indication of the type of crank attracted to it.

He described the killings as "a job well done" and when one victim asked him why he was stabbing him, Moore told detectives: "I just said, 'fun'... He carried on screaming."

Clearly these people are not normal. That isn't to say that paedophiles and murderers are not to be found in the general population, they are. The point is that homosexuals commit these offences out of all proportion to their numbers. Why? The answer may never be known. Certainly a rejection of a society that largely rejects them, but also a desire to lash out because deep down, they hate what they are. Future government social policy needs to take this into consideration. It won't under either the Tories or Labour however — the queer lobby will see to that. In the meantime, there will be more deaths, more child molestation and more intrusive queer 'culture'.

THE CHURCH AND THE HOMOSEXUALS

Archbishop Carey's moral crusade floundered last month in a blaze of publicity as the nation's moral authority proved impotent to put its own house in order and attend to the problem of homosexuals within the Church.

The Archbishop's problem is that homosexuality is specifically forbidden within the Bible upon pain of death, which prompted one 'gay' activist Ian McKellen to solve the problem by ripping out the offending passages from Leviticus wherever he found a Bible.

The growing problem of homosexuals within the church and their growing demands is a deeply divisive one for the church and could even lead to a split. Church leaders have consistently fudged the issue hoping that it would go away. Homosexuals are estimated to make up between 10-15 per cent of the clergy.

The Reverend Christopher Wardale of Holy Trinity Church Darlington is living proof of the hypocrisy in the Church of England. Mr. Wardale is openly homosexual and lives with his long term partner, Malcolm Macourt. After the 1987 General Synod which called for homosexual clergy not prepared to repent to offer their resignations, Wardale did just that. His Bishop merely said: "Don't be silly."

The House of Bishops' statement

Issues in Human Sexuality published in 1991 judged homosexual activity by non-clergy as acceptable. Homosexual clergy want the same rights, but in October Derek Rawcliffe assistant Bishop of Ripon was sacked for conducting homosexual blessing ceremonies.

These problems all came to the boil last month when Southwark Cathedral was made available to the Lesbian and Gay Christian Movement for their 20th anniversary celebration service. The service was attended by the Bishop of Southwark, the Bishop of Croydon and the Bishop of Kingston as well as the Bishop of Guildford, the Rt Rev John Gladwin who spoke from the pulpit to the 2,000 lesbians and homosexuals present. In his excrement, and says: "Who said that human beings are supposed to be monogamous anyway? Why, some boring old fart in the Bible that's who!"

Protestors stood outside the Cathedral with banners reading 'Dunblane demands a total ban on sodomy'.

Archbishop Carey said that the decision to hold the service had not involved him or other Bishops and that the use by the movement of the Cathedral did not constitute Church support!

The Lesbian and Gay Christian Movement has 400 members of the clergy and declares homosexuality to be 'a gift from God'. The movement is being investigated by the police for blasphemy after publishing the poem The love that dares to speak its name on the Internet. The poem, about the homosexual fantasies of a Roman standing at the foot of Jesus Christ on the cross and explicit homo-erotic details of what he does with the body, was last published in Gay News which was successfully prosecuted for blasphemy in 1977.

● Former Archbishop Runcie was attacked by the current Archbishop although not by name for meddling in national politics of which he knew nothing. Said Archbishop Carey speaking on the Faith in the City document produced by the Church which attacked the government in the 1980s: "When it comes to the most effective political or economic means of attaining desirable moral goals, the Churches, though they may hope to make a useful contribution [to debate] do not speak with special authority and expertise." Lord Runcie has also been taken to task over a new biography of him, The Reluctant Archbishop in which he reveals that he ordained practising homosexuals and also betrayed confidences entrusted to him because of his position.

● Friar Adrian McLeish has been gaoled for six years for indecently assaulting young boys, possessing and distributing indecent pictures of speech, Gladwin affirmed that Homosexual partnerships "fall short of the Christian ideal." The service saw gay and lesbian banners paraded down the aisle and the sale inside the Cathedral of The A-Z of Gay Sex which gives advice on sex in public toilets, group sex and the use of

Why you should join the BNP

As a member of the British National Party you will be doing something about what is going wrong with your world instead of just complaining about it. You will be joining your strength to that of many others with the same beliefs and goals. Your membership dues will go to strengthen the party's infrastructure, to pay for the telephone lines, computer equipment, printing costs, and everything else necessary to build our movement and spread our message of hope and national renewal to the rest of our people.

You will feel part of a larger movement working towards the same beliefs and goals. Almost nothing can be done by an individual. Only through working in concert can anything worthwhile be achieved. You will be able to make a difference, able to make your life count working towards a noble goal. As a BNP member, you will be taking a hand in shaping the future and in determining the destiny of our race and nation.

Yours will be the personal satisfaction and fulfilment of doing something that really matters, and which makes your life count. Lastly, you should join the BNP because it is the right thing to do. The British people have not remained unconquered for nearly a thousand years to give up a proud and noble birthright without a struggle. Our cause is right and just.

Join us — and work for victory!

PERVERT: Adrian McLeish picked victims from congregation children and of importing pornographic videos of children from Holland. Police said that the pornography haul, some 9,000 images on computer is the biggest ever found in Britain, and with some of the worst material. McLeish swapped image files with paedophile perverts from around the world, including pictures of boys that he had himself abused. McLeish had been abusing boys for at least five years.

● Fife education's religious and moral education advisor, Michael Kincaid has appeared in court and been suspended after pleading guilty to indecent exposure and performing an indecent act on a main road.

● The Rt Rev John Sentamu, the Bishop of Stepney has said that Church of England services need to include ethnic music and dance to attract young black people. African drums and the 'Brixton sound' is what will increase church attendances said the Bishop.

And Church leaders wonder why they have declining services! As BN said in August, until the Church can rid itself of its own internal contradictions, it cannot carry any moral weight in telling the rest of the nation how it should behave.

SCIENCE, EDUCATION AND NATIONAL PROSPERITY

Not so long ago there was a great fuss over the apparent fact that 'A' levels and 'O' levels are getting easier. At around the same time, Sir Frank Whittle died and was remembered as the father of the jet engine and the creator of a whole new industry. There should have been a connection made between scientific endeavour, standards in education and national prosperity, but there was not.

Clearly, high educational standards are necessary for scientific achievement and those standards are slipping. Scientific achievement is necessary for the creation of new discoveries, inventions, applications and even whole new industries. All of these things provide drive and growth to the economy, generate new wealth and ultimately maintain or improve the living standards of everyone in the country. As such, this is an issue which affects everyone.

The historical evidence in Britain is one of tremendous scientific achievement followed typically by a lack of support and industrial follow-through. All too often, inventions have been allowed to go to America and increasingly to Japan. The spectre now is that falling educational standards will jeopardize future scientific achievement altogether and lead to a long term decline in industrial and technological development and consequently, a long term decline in the national prosperity.

Cambridge University in particular is highly critical of the lowered standards it sees every year with its new intake of undergraduates.

For the first time, the Treasury has admitted that investment in scientific research helps the nation's economic performance. The fact that the Treasury has only just realised this self evident truth shows completely how unfit for office have been the politicians of the last fifty to sixty years or so. It is not a complete coincidence that in this time period, Britain has sunk from a major world power with huge industrial and military capacity into a poor second-rate nation.

Sir Frank Whittle

Typical of this government neglect is the story of Sir Frank Whittle who died in August in America after having turned his back on Britain after the British government turned its back on him. Not only known as the inventor of the jet engine, Whittle was the pioneer of high-flow compressors and the first patent holder of the turbofan and bypass jet engines. Whittle, singlehandedly, gave Britain a huge lead in jet design, but the lead he gave Britain in terms of jet engine development was squandered through government disinterest and lack of funding. The jet engine which transformed the skies of the world made billions for the Americans.

Sir Frank first outlined his ideas for a jet engine at the age of twenty-eight which were rejected by the Air Ministry. Whittle persevered and patented his plans for a turbojet in 1930 and then spent five years looking for a backer. Lack of funds meant that he was unable to renew his patent — a problem only all too familiar to today's British inventors. Eventually, two friends helped him form Power Jets Ltd. His cash-starved company tested its first engine in 1937 but it was only after reports that Germany was close to developing jet aircraft that official interest revived. The first jet aircraft flew at RAF Cranwell in 1941 but the jet-powered Gloucester Meteor made even now. In October Professor Sir Harry Kroto became the first British scientist to be awarded the Nobel prize for a decade. He won the award for the joint discovery of a third form of carbon known as Buckminsterfullerene or buckyballs for short.

Buckyballs

There are many British inventions made even now. In October Professor Sir Harry Kroto became the first British scientist to be awarded the Nobel prize for a decade. He won the award for the joint discovery of a third form of carbon known as Buckminsterfullerene or buckyballs for short.

Buckyballs are essentially carbon spheres. It is postulated that buckyballs will be used in new super-lightweight magnets, organic superconductors that lose all resistance to electricity at high temperatures, molecule-scale electronics, drugs and even lubricants like motor oils.

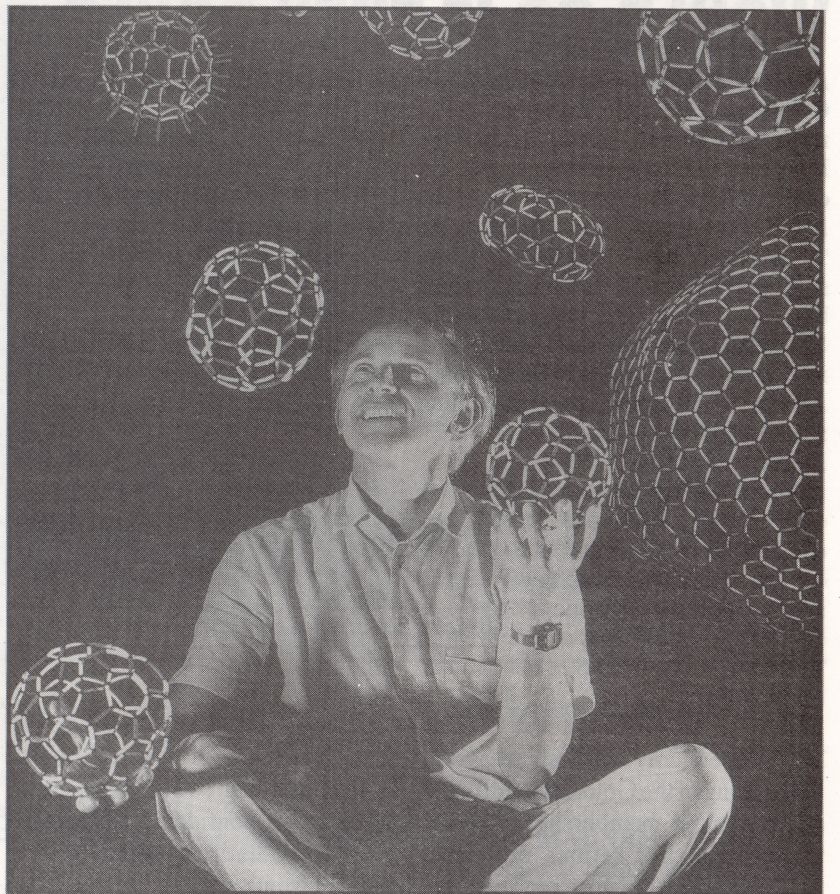

Even so, much of the research has to be carried out in America, such is the parlous state of research facilities in Britain. Companies like Shell, BP and ICI — all approached for funding — turned the team down. Had they not done so says Kroto, for a measly £20,000 any of these companies would by now, in all probability, own the patents.

Simple brilliance

A more mundane invention was made by Dr. Joshua Silver, an atomic physicist of New College Oxford: A revolutionary pair of glasses. Instead of glass or plastic lenses, the lenses are made of two membranes of transparent polyester sealed onto a carrying ring within a standard frame.

"Most science policy research shows that only economies that invest in research are able to exploit existing knowledge for economic gain... It should be obvious that for [the] micro-electronics industry to flourish someone had to invent the transistor. This needed outstanding scientists who were adequately supported. The final development of the transistor at Bell labs in America was based on decades of solid-state physics and chemistry research. Theoretically, it was completely underpinned by quantum mechanics — the greatest intellectual advance of the 20th century. If we continue to do less and less research, we would be as parasites on the backs of the countries that continue to carry out leading-edge science. Indeed, science policy research suggests we would probably lack the expertise properly to exploit scientific breakthroughs that took place abroad."

Professor Sir Harry Kroto

Professor Kroto: British Nobel Prize winner for scientific achievement

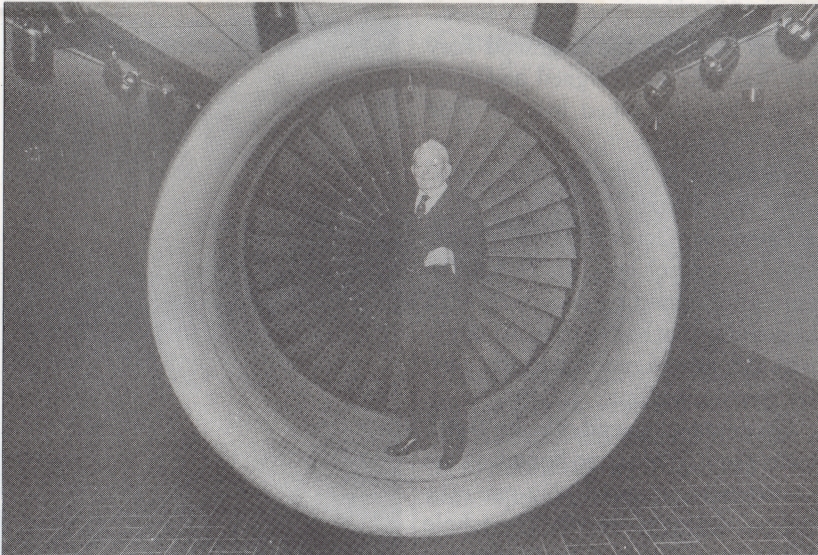

A tiny duct allows an inert liquid to fill the membranes to the exact specifications necessary to correct the eyesight of 80 per cent of the population, at which point the duct is permanently sealed. The glasses do away with eye tests in favour of a do-it-yourself approach and cost just 66p. The obvious market is in the Third World, although as Dr. Silver said: "Why shouldn't we as well as the third world have cheap glasses?"

Since WWII, 55 per cent of the world's major inventions have come from Britain, yet shortsighted industry leaders leave the inventors to seek funding from abroad. Every year Britain loses £165 billion in inventions that go abroad.

The contrast between America and Britain could not be more marked. Said Silver: "I was within hours of losing my world-wide patent cover because I didn't have the money to extend it. I had just finished a letter to an American friend with access to a Social Investment Fund, when the President of the fund itself turned up in New College and wrote out a cheque on the spot." The solution lies in our past, now long abandoned. Said Silver again: "The Japanese system is to put interest-free money into technologies that look incredible, which is repaid when they become successful. Ironically, they based it on our own system of the sixties."

Both Tory and Labour parties have done nothing for scientific research in this country. Indeed, they have cut funding, and positively discouraged the best British brains. The British National Party has a wholly different attitude. Along with the party's belief that government sometimes has to give a lead to industry, so the party recognises absolutely the importance of scientific research. The BNP would fund research at least to the level of our industrial competitors. The extra funding in the context of NHS, welfare and military spending would be a drop in the ocean, but so very important.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CURRY WATCH

Regular readers will remember BN's Currywatch feature that explored the total ethnic eating experience. This month, BN shows how immigration enriches all with its multi-cultural diversity just as it does in the third world.

Essex is particularly blessed with ethnic take-aways. On Canvey Island, the Saqui Tandoori restaurant on Canvey High Street provides an unfed up eating experience for those fed up with British fare. Lovers of exotic dishes can try chicken tikka laced with as many as eight industrial staples. Boring Canvey Islanders were unamused and refused to pay the bill after one of a party of nine was made sick by the meal. In nearby Laindon, real connoisseurs of ethnic food could have visited the Red Rose Balti House Tandoori until finicky health inspectors closed it down. Inspector Hart told Basildon magistrates that the store room was infested with mice and dead birds. He also testified that the whole place reeked of mouse urine and that the store room had thousands of mice droppings trampled into the floor. Mice had nested in a bag of rice and other bags of food had been gnawed open and were covered by mice droppings and urine.

He said: "Mice readily spread food poisoning. They carry bacteria in their guts and excrete it in their faeces. They also come in direct contact with sewers and the germs get on their feet and skin and is then passed onto food." Restaurant owner Mr. Miah is to reopen as soon as health requirements can be met.

Just up the road in Pitsea, a furious disabled couple were denied service at their local Bilash Indian restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson believe they were refused service because of their disability, but the owner said he turned them away because they smelt. He said: "If they turn up here again I will kill them. I own this place and it's up to me. I didn't turn them away because they were disabled, I turned them away because they smelt."

Further afield in Hertfordshire, two diners were also denied a chance to sample the exotic taste of the East but found their visit to the Dhaka Tandoori in Luton exciting nonetheless when they were attacked with baseball bats by staff.

David Ives and a partially sighted friend ordered a beer but had difficulty studying the menu in the subdued lighting conditions. After not being able to make their order quick enough, the waiter swept their drinks away and summoned other staff who attacked the pair with the bats. David Ives was beaten on the head, back, arms and legs as he tried to protect himself. The owner of the Tandoori, Mr. Foyzul Islam and his brother, Sirajul admitted affray and were each given a 12-month conditional discharge. Mr. Ives received £2,000 compensation and his friend, £500.

The exotic and exciting multi-cultural eating experience for connoisseurs of ethnic food in Britain is unmatched anywhere else in the world. Courageous Britons all over the country are an example to us all as they go forth in their quest for exotic ethnic food.

Bon appetit!

ONE-THIRD OF BLACKS WOULD GO IF THEY COULD

A survey carried out by the Scarman Centre at Leicester University has revealed that more than 30 per cent of Leicester's Afro-Caribbeans would emigrate tomorrow given the chance. A full 10 per cent of Leicestershire's 9,000 strong black community was surveyed and found that blacks have become a virtual underclass. Strikingly, one-third said that they intend to return to the Caribbean. Among the 36 to 45 age group, the statistic climbed to 46 per cent. In the real world of course, nothing like this number will ever return because of considerations of cost and lack of support. Nevertheless, it is striking testimony to the desire of blacks to return if they could — and this is before economic conditions deteriorate even further than they will, and without any government inducements. Given adequate funding, it is clear that hundreds of thousands of blacks would go home tomorrow. It is ironic that the BNP, whose primary consideration is the welfare of the British people and often called 'racist', is the only party to offer black people the land of their dreams.

Referendum Party News

The Referendum Party despite having the backing of the Goldsmith millions and a reputed membership of more than 10,000 has serious problems finding activists. Most recruits are elderly Tories disenchanted with Europe and of little use in fighting a campaign.

BN has learned that contrary to press statements to the effect that Goldsmith has 189 candidates in place and is confident of achieving 500-600 by the election, the reality is that Goldsmith has just 70 candidates. This is not many more than the BNP expects to have — and the BNP hasn't got the benefit of £20 million behind it!

GOOD NEWS ON RACE

It's not all bad news on race and immigration. Occasionally, there are some happy endings — or at least, some steps in the right direction.

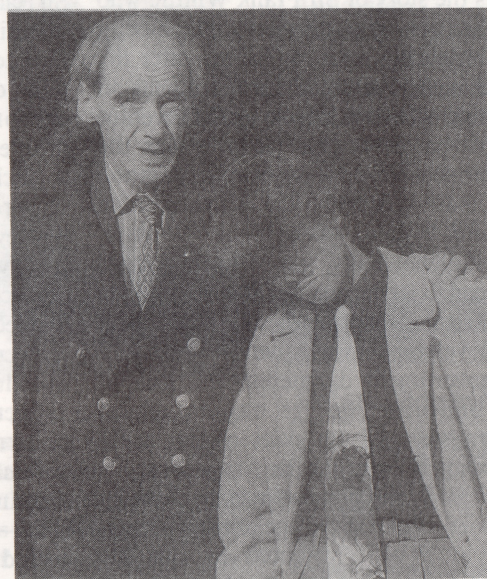

Last month showed that money was no guarantee of anything when illegal immigrant, Nepalese Jayaram Khadka found himself directed onto the nearest flight out to the Himalayas after he lost his application for exceptional leave to remain in the country. Unpatriotic Khadka clearly didn't want to leave and had nothing good to say about Nepal. But Khadka, who had been 'adopted' by millionaire, Mr. Richard Morley found that money couldn't buy everything and that he has to go. Morley, who has made Khadka his heir said that he would emigrate to Nepal along with Jayaram.

In another victory for commonsense, a middle-aged white woman in Middlesbrough has lost custody of two Nigerian boys who had been placed with her privately by their mother who continued to work in London and who plans to return to Nigeria.

The Nigerian mother wrote to ask for her children back and unbelievably, had to fight through the courts to get them back. But at the appeal court hearing, the judge made it clear that it was right the children be given back to their natural mother to return to "their own race and culture."

He stole £31,000 from his own party's coffers.

Mrs Day had thought of divorce but told friends she feared that she would be killed. Mr. Day, himself confined to a wheelchair after the crash denied murder and admitted the lesser charge of manslaughter.

TORY SPLITS, INCOMPETENCE AND CORRUPTION

Tory Home Secretary, Michael 'hard core' Howard won plaudits for his proposals to combat crime early last month. More burglars should be sent to prison and for longer he said. Honesty in Sentencing is supposed to do away with remission whereby a burglar sentenced for three years in fact serves only 18 months before release.

The proposals will not however mean prisoners serving twice as long because 'hard core' Howard is anxious not to double the prison population. Judges will therefore only sentence criminals to what they would have served under the old system. Sacked by the government So in the case of the burglar above, the new sentence would be 18 months. Even so, good behaviour inside will

Another Tory fiasco has been the Nursery voucher scheme which even loyal Tory authorities testing the scheme have condemned as bureaucratic and still be rewarded by up to 20 per cent off the sentence. The end result is that, contrary to public belief, the majority of criminals will get out quicker thanks to Michael Howard — friend of the criminal.

'Serious' criminals however are for the high jump! Serious drug offenders for instance will get a mandatory seven years for a third offence of supplying hard drugs. Home Office statistics however reveal that there have been no recorded cases of such a third time offender coming to court. Ah well, better safe than sorry!

not providing any more nursery places than was available previously.

●In a regression to the Victorian era, the government denied any link between public health and lack of clean water. Unpaid water bills resulted in 6,000 disconnections last year and the British Medical Association (BMA) said that disconnection increased the risk of dysentery and hepatitis A; basic hygiene and food preparation become impossible, a spokesman said. Speaking for the government, the Department of Health said that there was no link between water disconnection and communicable disease.

●Troubles within the Tory party never seem to end. After David Heathcote Amery resigned over Europe, Terry Dicks has been sacked as a Parliamentary private secretary for not voting with the government on the handgun bill. He remains on the government benches. So too does John Redwood despite being unable to tell voters to vote Tory at the next election. Redwood is the second Tory to decline to back his own party, as Teddy Taylor described Goldsmith's party as a "bright new party" which could be "very significant."

●Neil Hamilton the disgraced Tory MP has still not resigned and John Major has not asked him to. And John Major wonders why his government is linked in the public mind with sleaze?

●Paymaster General David Willetts looks very much up to his neck in the mire after admitting deceiving MPs by denying that he had tried to tamper with the investigation into the cash for questions affair.

No doubt at the end of it, he'll still have a job. There is no honour in the government anymore. No-one ever resigns unless forced to. The whole government reeks of corruption and the people can smell it.

Michael 'hard core' Howard

The Federation of Small Businesses, which has more than 90,000 members — many more than the CBI — has voted to leave the EU. The CBI's poll on the currency issue, on which it bases its views about business opinion, obtained only 212 responses, less than 3 per cent of its membership. Of this number only 28 per cent (59 responses) favoured abolishing our currency.

However much its chairmen may approve of 'Europe' in their off-duty lunches at the CBI, British business is investing globally. In 1995 ICI, for instance, authorised capital expenditure of over £550 million in Asia Pacific, three times its commitment to Continental Europe. Membership of the EU entails costs which are certain and massive while the gains, if any, are marginal and uncertain. No rational individual or properly managed business would arrange their affairs on such a basis.

In fact the advantages of EU membership are as illusory as the king's new suit in the Hans Andersen fairy tale. For the British people, leaving the EU will bring real gains. These include an end to payments to the EU of around £8 billion gross, £3.5 billion net (equivalent to two pence on income tax); recovery of control of 60-70 per cent of North Sea fishing grounds; an end to agricultural quotas which reserve portions of the British market for continental producers; recovery of our right to negotiate worldwide trading agreements; removal of the EU's power to impose a world-wide ban on British products or to order the British Government to pay huge sums to pregnant service women, and to remove constraints on suspected IRA terrorists, in the name of the "Single Market."

The "Single Market," so often invoked by Europhiles as a means of assuring common standards, is simply a cloak for federalist ambitions. As a market there is nothing special about it. The international standards system (ISO), written in English, is the preferred standard for the world outside the EU with its own quaint CEN system written in French. Of all the horrors the Tories have visited on us over the past 15 years, two slot easily into the crime category; a precursor of both was the Baroness's notorious pronouncement that "there is no society, only people." First, there was the dismantling and destruction of the NHS; and second, the disaster known as Care in the Community, which is perhaps their worst transgression.

Penny-pinching masquerading as idealism; disregard for the least able in our mythical society cynically elevated to liberal thinking. Whatever way you put it, this abnegation of all responsibility puts at risk not just the mentally ill, but, as we have seen too often, the general public too. Within the past few weeks we have heard the latest reports on murders committed by sick people turned on to the streets, where many will die.

Any mention of protection will earn you a sharp smack across the hand; protection is a very dirty word. It is all about rights now, the rights of the mentally ill, and that does not include the right to protection.

Families who ask questions are branded "difficult", and those voicing a different opinion risk being deprived of any information, on the convenient grounds of confidentiality. It may also deprive the patient of the family's support, but it is all for the cause.

The Tories stand rightly accused of abusing those least able to fend for themselves, but to their equal shame so too do the advocates of psychological political correctness. They sleep together in a truly unholy alliance.

Meg Henderson,
The Guardian.

News that Hillingdon hospital will no longer accept emergency admissions of people aged over 75 is doubly ironic.

Why should priority be given to those entering the country who have never contributed a single penny to local social care resources while our pensioners, who have paid their taxes and National Insurance contributions all their lives, are denied hospital treatment at the end of their days?

ASIAN RACISTS ATTACK WHITE FOOTBALL CLUB

In Nelson, Lancashire Asians perpetrated a sickening attack on a football ground. Broken glass, nails and razor blades were strewn across the pitch in a deliberate attempt to maim players of Nelson FC. The Lancashire Evening Telegraph was in no doubt about the motive and ran its front page with 'Racist attack on soccer club'.

The attack is only the latest in a string of attacks which have included racist anti-white graffiti and damage to the ground.

Club Chairman Ken Broom said: "The blades were deliberately set to maim and cause serious injury. Someone could have cut an artery and died on the pitch." Fortunately, club officials discovered the blades and scoured the pitch inch by inch to remove all hazards.

The case is eerily similar to the same kind of racial attacks by Asians on a cricket ground just across the Pennines in Dewsbury. One-time Yorkshire County Cricket ground, headquarters of Dewsbury Cricket Club suffered the same kind of treatment. In 1989, following endless trouble with Asian youths and vandalism (including sowing the cricket field with glass), Dewsbury Cricket Club was forced to leave. The ground is now the home of two Asian cricket teams and has been given to the huge Makarzi Mosque by council Tories on a 999-year lease for the token sum of £1. The vandalism has since stopped. The Tories who hope that such grovelling to the Asians will secure votes might well come unstuck as white people in the town are furious at the obvious racial and political manoeuvres by Asians and Tories.

The BNP is contesting Dewsbury at the next election.

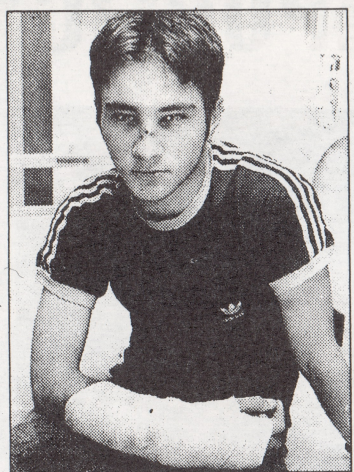

Groundsmen use metal detectors to clear razor blades from the pitch

More Asian Race Violence

Yet another victim of race-hate violence is Andrew Dunwell, 16 of Dewsbury. Andrew had been repeatedly racially abused by one particular Asian before the attack — carried out by the same youth and three of his friends. Andrew was walking to work when he saw the Asian go past in a car. Turning into a park by way of a shortcut, Andrew saw the same Asian talking to a group of his friends. The attack happened just afterwards at 2.00pm when four Asians rushed Andrew from behind. He was beaten with a club to the head, hand and body. When he fell to the ground, he was kicked repeatedly.

Surgeons have put a metal plate and pins into his hand which was badly broken when Andrew was trying to protect his head. Andrew also suffered a broken nose and needed four stitches in a head wound.

After the attack, Andrew managed to stagger to a nearby club where members called an ambulance.

His mother said: "He has been lucky to escape with his life, but some mother soon is going to be burying their child six feet under."

Police made two arrests — both were released on bail. In the absence of witnesses, a trial is unlikely.

RACE RAPE

A girl of fifteen was gang-raped by three Asians in Birmingham who bundled her into their car in broad daylight in a busy shopping High street.

The three started by making derogatory references to the pretty blonde teenager who had been out window shopping. When she ignored them, they grabbed her off the street and pulled her into the car. After being driven for a short time, she was forced into a house and held by force of numbers. Each man raped her during the course of the afternoon and evening.

The men finally let her go and drove her around before dumping her on the street at 3.30am. Police officer, D.I. Wooldridge said: "This was a horrendous attack on a girl in broad daylight. She is not a teenager who tries to make herself look older and there is no suggestion that she was dressed provocatively. She is very much a fifteen-year-old."

This event did manage to make it on to the nation's TV screens. What was special about it, said the newscasters, was that no-one had come forward to report the event when it occurred or to try and stop it. Shame enough indeed, and an indictment of modern liberal Britain. An even bigger story lay behind the unpleasant racial overtones. This was ignored. Turning the story on its head, the outcry if three whites had abducted an Asian girl and raped her in a similar fashion would have been enormous. Yet is a fact that white on Asian rapes and white on black rapes are nill. It just doesn't happen, let alone in a gang setting. The phenomenon of gang rape has come to be associated in the public mind as another facet of the nightmare reality of multi-racialism.

● In another rape case, asylum seeker Ali Noor a Somali living in a council flat in Islington has been sentenced to 18 years for raping two elderly women aged 76 and 84. Two other rapes on a woman of 70 and a fellow Somali of 20 were left on file.

Noor came to Britain in 1989 and committed his first sex attack in 1992 after following a woman off a train in Hertfordshire. He was acquitted because of a technicality in the way DNA samples were taken. In June 1995, Noor was arrested outside the 70-year-old woman's home after he had indecently assaulted her. Freed on bail, Noor took just five days to break into the Somali woman's flat and rape her. He was finally caught in Peckham yards from where he had beaten and raped the 84-year-old and

Ali Noor: Rapist

DNA evidence linked him to the rape of the 76-year-old the year before.

Judge Neil Denison sentencing at the Old Bailey called it "One of the worst cases I have ever had to deal with."

RACE GANG VIOLENCE

Gang violence in Walthamstow, East London between Black and Asian gangs has resulted in several stabbings — one nearly fatal. Police and councillors have called for racial harmony, but the calls have been greeted with widespread derision by the youths who know what racial realities in the 1990s mean.

Up-and-coming Blacks and Asians are fighting for control of the streets of Walthamstow to establish their own racial control of the area. One attack left a youth with a punctured lung after being stabbed. Retaliation came when a gang of Blacks stormed a 123 bus copying a similar Asian attack on a bus at around the same time (see front page). But they were, in turn, attacked immediately afterwards by Asians resulting in an all-out fight.

Nearby Leyton and Leytonstone is every bit as ghastly as Hackney, itself only a mile away. White people meanwhile are moving out in droves. Ah! The joys of multi-racialism and the diversity of its violence.

BN BRIEFING

BSE — HUNDREDS TO DIE

The Creutzfeldt-Jacob disease surveillance unit at Edinburgh says that hundreds will die of mad cow disease and that the toll will peak in seven years time with most dying from eating burgers in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

POLICE A LAUGHING STOCK

South Yorkshire police have advertised in the Gay Times to try and recruit more queers into the police force. The advert shows a young PC with the caption 'Fancy a chat with Tom?' As a result, South Yorkshire police have been turned into a laughing stock all over the country. Serving policeman, Acting Detective Chief Inspector David Bullett of South Yorks police has written an open letter to his superiors saying that he is ashamed and embarrassed to be a member of South Yorks police. He described Police chiefs as out of touch with the public and the vast majority of serving police officers.

EU FISH MADNESS

Following EU demands that Britain cut its fishing fleet by half to preserve non-British fishing catches comes good news. The EU has said that an extra 7,500 tons of fish may be caught in waters off the South West this year. The bad news is that the share for British fishermen is just 310 tons.

● A Portuguese naval vessel fired on a Spanish trawler illegally fishing in Portuguese waters last month and injured two Spanish fishermen.

ILLEGALS DROWN

Three-hundred would-be illegal Haitian immigrants died in an illegal voyage to the United States. The boat has vanished, presumably sunk along with the immigrants.

● Likewise, twenty-five Moroccans drowned when their boat sank in the straits of Gibraltar on their way to Spain from Morocco.

● In Italy, the government deliberately let its deportation legislation lapse last month. The rule which is required to be renewed periodically means that any illegal immigrants that enter Italy cannot be deported because there is no legislation covering illegal immigration. The immigrants are free to travel anywhere inside the EU.

COMBAT KNIVES

The media-driven frenzy against combat knives has at least had one welcome result: the focussing of attention on one group exempt from legislation from carrying knives — Sikhs. Parents in a Peterborough school were horrified to find out that a Sikh had been invited to their children's school to explain the Sikh religion, including the wearing of nine inch daggers.

Letters

Write to: The Editor, British Nationalist, PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

Sir,
Whilst enjoying your newspaper very much, would it not be possible to have some kind of league table/activity chart in an 'around the regions' section to indicate which groups and areas are recruiting the most members or generating the most enquiries — or even 'group of the month'?

Also, can we have the BN Currywatch feature back please — our local Indian restaurant thought that a review in BN meant being praised in 'Balti News'!

Mr. A. Ralphs,
Birmingham.

Sir,
A new leaflet from the party is sensibly headed 'Who are the real racists?' This is an excellent point to make.

Whilst the term 'racist' can be used in more than one context, it is generally used in a derogatory sense and, incidentally, as a means of suppressing freedom of speech.

It has long seemed to me that, in the pejorative sense, the word would most accurately be applied to those unwise or malicious people, who have wanted to introduce the issue of race, with its attendant problems, into this country.

The term is inappropriate, though, when wrongly applied to those millions of people of goodwill who have, all along, wanted to keep such problems out of Britain.

This being so, there should be no hesitation in labelling the opposition with the term they deserve.

J. Warner,
Guildford, Surrey.

Sir,
BN so greatly improved over recent months in style, appearance and content, has become the authentic populist voice of British Nationalism. We are convinced that it is our strongest line in propaganda.

We are distributing complimentary copies of the paper as part of our election campaign — each copy with an insert of leaflets — and believe that BN's are also being passed around among friends and relatives. I only wish we could distribute twice as many.

The enclosed letter, typical of a small but steady stream of approval we receive, tells the story.

Roger Barden,
Dewsbury BNP.

Sir,
I should like to thank you for the leaflet that was delivered to my home. I agree with all your comments. I do not wish to know more about the BNP or to join, but I will pledge my vote [to the BNP] in the forthcoming general election.

I am heartily sick of seeing our culture and traditions being replaced by the left wing view of life. In short we need a leader; not to keep us in line with Europe and America, but a leader who will give us back our pride and self-respect.

So good luck to your party.

John,
Cheam, Surrey.

Sir,
With all the political slogans being devised to grab peoples' attention, I came up with something that could be used by the BNP, possibly in conjunction with gas filled balloons which could be released. The slogan is simply:

'This election, don't waste your time with any other party. Vote BNP.'

Used with Major and Blair in party hats with their silly grins, it could be humorous and memorable.

Mr. A. Flick B.A. Hons.
Hayes, Middlesex.

British National Party Handbook on PROPAGANDA

SPREADING THE WORD is a handbook on propaganda that has been produced by the British National Party to supplement its Activists' Handbook published last year. Spreading The Word is illustrated and runs to 60 pages. It contains five sections, namely: (1) General Principles of Propaganda; (2) Recruitment; (3) Canvassing for Elections; (4) Speaking to the Media; and (5) Speaking from the Platform and Presentation of Party Meetings. This handbook devotes special attention to familiar enemy smears against the BNP and nationalists generally, advising the reader on the best techniques for dealing with these, whether they be raised in the process of trying to recruit new members, when canvassing voters on the doorstep or when taking part in interviews with the press, radio or television. The handbook is a mine of information on every problem involved in spreading the nationalist message and winning support for the BNP. It costs £1.50 plus 36p p&p.

FRANCE

The Front National has begun a campaign to woo the traditional constituent of the left — the jobless and those on low pay. Jean Marie Le Pen started his campaign with his well-publicised opening of a soup kitchen for the homeless at the Gare Saint-Lazare, Paris. Hot tasty thick soup was ladled out for the poor of Paris along with sardines, bread and chocolate which was attended by teams of journalists to cover the story.

Already armed with popular nationalism, Le Pen's new goal is to tap into the reservoir of disenchantment with the economy. Growing concern at the effect that the EU is having on France is creating an ideal situation for Le Pen who almost alone among politicians is voicing concern.

Bruno Megret, the architect of the new line is looking for the FN to grow beyond people's fear of immigration and to grasp social and economic credibility.

At the same time, the FN is getting representation on school boards, in student's unions and forming its own trade unions. The aim is to entrench and strengthen its position in French society.

SOUTH AFRICA

Lawlessness in South Africa has reached epidemic proportions. The stability of white law and order has been replaced for the new multi-racial South Africa — murder, rape and robbery are at record levels. Crime touches everyone in the country including tourists and businessmen.

British engineer, Roderick Wake in SA on business was found murdered in his bungalow. He had been strangled and robbed. Julie Fairbanks-Smith, a businesswoman was on holiday in South Africa when both she and her five-year-old daughter Emma were murdered and robbed in a guest house. They were both stabbed to death; the

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Last month, the former Emperor of the Central African Republic (C.A.R.) Jean-Bedel Bokassa who modelled himself on Napoleon and compared himself with Jesus Christ died. Bokassa was truly the ultimate African dictator. Bokassa's coronation ceremony in 1977 cost $30 million — 25 per cent of his country's revenues for that year. The throne was modelled on a huge gilded eagle weighing two tons and with a thirty-foot wingspan, contained 2,000 diamonds and was valued at $5 million.

Bokassa's rule lasted from 1966 to 1979 when French troops kicked him out, and in that time he had 17 wives and 55 children. He was also the first African head of state to be tried for murder, cannibalism and torture.

The C.A.R. was a typical basket case economy. Nothing worked, corruption was the norm and incompetence, murder, torture and oppression were rife. The lowest point, was his killing of 100 children who refused to buy their school uniforms from one of his wife's shops. Bokassa himself killed one and poked the eye out of another.

He was a megalomaniac ruler naming streets and squares after himself, awarding himself medals and taking the titles: President for life in 1972, Marshall in 1975 and Emperor in 1977. Other 'achievements' were the banning of demonstrations, strikes, elections and censoring of foreign news.

'Emperor' Bokassa

guest house owner was also murdered, and another man was seriously injured.

Political murders and torture abound — perpetrated by the ANC against Inkatha Zulus. 432 murders of Inkatha office holders to date. But since the killings are not being carried out by whites, the murders do not outrage western liberal opinion, and TV screens are blank.

The total breakdown in law and order is matched by a nose-diving economy and a scandal plagued ANC government rocked by resignations and sackings over corruption. At present, there are enough whites to save the country from total chaos, but for how much longer is unknown.

USA

On the same day that US President Bill Clinton got himself reelected, California voted in a referendum on proposition 209 to outlaw the supremacy in law of Blacks and Hispanics over whites, and also of women over men. 'Affirmative Action' has been the quaint title of laws which viciously discriminate against white people and white men in particular in every area of life — in schooling, employment and promotion. White people had been excluded from employment in favour of non-whites and passed over in schooling and in promotions in favour of less well qualified non-whites. 'Affirmative Action' was an iniquitous policy masquerading as good. It was unjust racial discrimination against white people and it was right that it should go. Other states are likely to follow suit in a groundswell of opinion that started with well-publicised court cases by white people alleging anti-white discrimination.

Blacks protest end of privilege

BNP GENERAL ELECTION FEATURE

When the British National Party contests the next General Election the party will have distributed, courtesy of the Post Office, some two-million leaflets going into two-million homes.

For the BNP, this will be a massive recruitment exercise and also a mass exercise in fighting elections. Some time after the next General Election when the public finally sees through Labour (who BN believes will win), there will be enormous opportunities for the BNP. Having done our recruiting in this election and having trained branch organisers right across the country in the necessities of fighting elections, the party will be well placed to take advantage of any opportunity which presents itself.

This month, BN features Steven Belshaw, standing for Ashfield at the next election.

Steven has been a party activist for six years and is the Organiser of the Mansfield and Ashfield group.

Ashfield is a working class town and is Labour held. The constituency contains many ex-miners and has a general air of neglect and dereliction about it; run-down, boarded-up shops are typical in the town centre and in fact these issues formed part of the party's appeal in last year's council elections when ex-miner Gary Marshal contested two wards on different occasions in Kirkby-in-Ashfield. The party obtained creditable votes of 6½ and 7½ per cent and built up a solid support base and a large paper round in the process.

In Ashfield, the BNP has become known as a campaigning party and was the only party to campaign against the building of housing on one of the few pieces of open space in the area — used by youngsters to play football. In the face of local opposition led by the BNP the ruling Labour council backed down and kept the open land for recreational use!

STEVEN BELSHAW

BY-ELECTION RESULT IN NEWHAM

Newham Organiser, Colin Smith represented the party in a council by-election in Forest Gate ward, Newham at the end of last month.

As usual in Newham, Labour were the runaway winners with 797 votes for 49 per cent of the vote (Labour control 60 seats out of 60!) followed by Scargill's Socialist Labour Party with 326 for 20 per cent.

Forest Gate ward is around 45 per cent non-white and has had no work done in the ward by the party previously at all, and has not seen any nationalist activity of any kind since 1979. In the event, Colin obtained a better than expected 86 votes for 5½ per cent of the vote and in the process beat the Liberal Democrats who scraped in with 63 votes or 4 per cent. The party's vote worked out to around 10 per cent of the white vote and is a distinct improvement on the recent Hackney by-elections the party engaged in. Other indications of better times ahead was the fact that the party obtained the vote it did in a six-way contest and the fact that the Independent — an old time Labour man undoubtedly took many BNP votes. Other votes were Conservative 205 (13%) and Independent 138 (8½%).

Leicester BNP reaches thousands

Leicester BNP is one of the hardest working branches in the country. The two target constituencies of Leicester West and Blaby are 85% and 20% leafleted respectively. More than 4,000 leaflets went out in October as the branch went out leafleting on eight occasions making for 32,725 so far this year.

Door-to-door paper sales are also up and the branch has even had the time to campaign against a mosque which Keith Vaz MP wants built in a 98 per cent white area.

GENERAL ELECTION FUND TARGET: £10,000; TOTAL RAISED: £5,545

The party urgently needs to raise £10,000 in a very short time to meet contingency bills for the running of the party's General Election campaign from the centre. This fund is entirely separate from locally organised election funds, whose purpose will be to raise money to finance local candidates. This central fund is intended to build up an adequate financial reserve to ensure that the party has an efficient headquarters organisation and is able to meet numerous expenses which will be involved in the central running of its election machine.

Included in the expenses will be the production of the BNP party political broadcast in which a professional camera will be hired (daily hire rates are from £350 plus per day!) to shoot footage to give it more impact and so increase the rate of recruitment and votes generated out of the broadcast; the printing costs of the party's election manifesto; the hire of a whole bank of telephones to deal with telephone enquiries from the broadcast and the hire of mobile telephones to assist organisers managing various campaigns; travel expenses incurred by personnel touring the country and in the transport of election literature to various constituencies; special publicity projects and not least, paying the printer a considerable sum in advance for the printing of the party's election addresses

(Two million leaflets don't come cheap!). It is for this purpose the party is targeting to raise £10,000.

Last month, the appeal, raised £787 taking the party well over the half way mark. BN wishes to thank all those who have donated to the fund over the last month, a very good figure indeed. The time to give is now! Help us raise the money we need. The party needs YOUR help. All readers should contribute to this fund. What have YOU done for the cause this month?

All donations should be marked 'General Election Fund' and sent to: PO. Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW

VACANCY

There are still vacancies left for General Election candidacies where people are desperate to vote for the BNP at the next election. All patriots wishing to be considered to represent the party should write to PO. Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW enclosing a political c.v.

There are no residential qualifications and seats could well be (and almost certainly will be) half way across the country from any candidate's home town. All that is required is that candidates are party members and on the electoral register.

SACKED!

This month, BN has dropped another two groups from its unit listing. Bedford and Devon groups of the BNP are no longer doing a proper job of promoting the party and as a consequence have been dropped.

When the party's efficiency drive began in Spring of this year, all groups and branches were informed that no excuses would be tolerated for non-performance. Groups could and would be dropped and branches could and would be relegated to group status, and Organisers sacked and replaced. Equally, up and coming groups could make branch status.

The fight the BNP has on its hands, for national salvation and to forge a stronger nationwide party to achieve that, allows no room for half-hearted Organisers. Organisers have to be single-minded and totally dedicated. It is the only way.

The coming General Election campaign will to some extent weed out the men from the boys. The activity and literature distribution rate of all groups and branches is being monitored by co-assistant National Organisers, Dave Bruce and Dave King. As a result, some long-established branches and Organisers are coming under scrutiny. Time for them to pull their socks up — if the cap fits, then do something about it!

CARDIFF REFORMED

Cardiff group of the BNP has been reformed following the death of group Organiser, Peter Fowler. The group was largely inactive in the months before Peter's death, but it is now hoped that Cardiff BNP will find a new lease of life and get active.

BNP ANNUAL RALLY ANNOUNCEMENT

Details of the party's annual rally, rescheduled for the New Year, have now been released. The date for the rally is:-

SATURDAY JANUARY 25th

BNP RAISES PRESS PROFILE

A simple press statement announcing a single candidacy at the next election generated excellent publicity for the party in Chingford and Woodford Green last month. The Wanstead & Woodford Guardian and the Chingford Guardian carried the stories — the Chingford

Guardian carrying the story for three straight weeks! Achieving publicity is both easy to do and can achieve good results as shown below. As the next election gets closer, all local Organisers need to be alert as to the possibility of gaining useful press publicity to raise the party's profile and make the public more aware of the BNP — and the issues upon which we shall be campaigning which will include, a commitment to full employment and restoration of the death penalty for child sex-killers, something the main three parties will not be doing.

Fear and anger as BNP announces it will stand in Chingford

THE far right British Nationalist Party revealed this week that it would be fielding a candidate in Chingford at the next general election. The news has sparked widespread condemnation from all the mainstream political groups.

The candidate, standing in the new Chingford and Woodford Green seat, is one of around 50 which the extreme right wing party will be putting up at the next election.

The BNP is refusing to announce who the candidate is until the new year, but he is known to be a local man. Anthony Lecomber, regional organiser for the party, said: "We've picked Chingford because we have a very good and popular local candidate there."

"We recognise Chingford as the best end of Waltham Forest, which is least affected by the devastating effects of immigration. There, residents can see the effects of that devastation in other parts of the borough." The announcement has been accompanied by a new leaflet campaign in which the BNP proposes the repatriation of coloured immigrants and accuses other political parties of being racist.

Mr Lecomber said his party was seeking a more populist appeal adding: "Our campaign is a change in tone, but the policies are the same. We believe that everyone suffers under the multi-racial system. Black and Asian people will do much better in their own lands."

Race hate fears as BNP names its man

THE extremist British Nationalist Party has named the candidate who will contest the Chingford and Woodford Green seat at the next general election.

He is former factory worker Alan Gould, 27, of Aldridge Way, Highams Park.

Unemployed Mr Gould, who was made redundant from a Leyton shoe factory which closed a month ago, is Walthamstow-born and has lived in neighbouring Waltham Forest all his life.

Last month the news that the far right BNP was to field a candidate in the area sparked widespread condemnation and disgust from the main political parties.

But Mr Gould said that while the party accepted it may not win, the move was designed to publicise the BNP and its policies.

The party is fielding 50 candidates at the next election and could qualify for a TV party political broadcast as a result.

"We're realistic about this. It's a recruitment drive and it provides publicity for us. But we're hoping to do the best we can," Mr Gould said.

"It's not a case of contesting an election and vanishing."

BNP candidate Alan Gould will try to convey a respectable image at the next general election but anti-racist groups say the party is just "conning people".

ing. We shall continue to push the party's message in the borough well after the next election."

A spokesman for the Anti-Nazi League has condemned the BNP and said it had only one policy — to kick the black and ethnic minorities out of the UK. He added that the BNP was conning people by suggesting otherwise.

And Chingford MP Iain Duncan Smith has urged people not to vote for the BNP, dismissing it as a "single-issue party".

Mr Gould said this was not true and claimed that the BNP had policies on crime, trade and the environment. And he said the party did not blame blacks and Asians for everything that was wrong with Britain today.

But the parliamentary candidate has made his views clear in a series of letters to the Guardian over the years.

Last year he replied to a letter from an Asian man who urged people to accept Britain is now multi-racial. In the letter Mr Gould said: "This is England and as far as I am concerned there is only one way in everything — the English way!"

Mr Gould's dedication to the BNP cause led him to stump up £400 out of his own pocket to put towards the £500 deposit needed to stand for Parliament.

"I know I may never see the money again but I'm prepared to take that risk," he said.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the European Community: trade with Europe where it suits us but no political ties.
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of Government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food; also the restoration of the fishing industry by protection of our traditional fishing grounds.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO; closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain; British withdrawal from the war in former Yugoslavia, where no British interest is at stake; the bringing home of British forces from Germany; the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- A return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
